MEMORANDUM FOR: [REDACTED]
Deputy to DCI for Resource Management

25X1

FROM: [REDACTED]
Chief, Data Support Group

SUBJECT: Comparison of "Major Outputs" with CIRIS Subjects

REFERENCE: a) Memo, DCI/IC 78-0058, to PRC(I) WG Members; Subj:
Agenda for Mtg 15 Sep 78 (on Major Outputs of NFIP),
dtd 13 Sep 78.

b) Alternate List by OMB of Major Outputs of NFIP,
dtd 15 Sep 78.

1. The candidate list of Major Outputs of the National Foreign Intelligence Program, and alternative offered by The Office of Management and Budget, References 1 and 2, cannot readily be related to existing Community data bases because of differences in scope and lack of exclusiveness in the output lists.

2. The 53 subject headings of Consolidated Intelligence Resources Information System (CIRIS) include the entire universe of information; i.e., they are encyclopedic by design. The Major Outputs lists tend to be more selective, but not in all cases. For example, monitoring of international treaties is included as a part of CIRIS Subject Foreign Policy, but this subject also satisfies the national policy-making entry in the list of Major Outputs. Thus, two Major Outputs are relatable to portions of a single CIRIS subject.

3. Some of the Major Outputs set forth in Reference a. can be translated into CIRIS subject equivalents and expressed in terms of dollar resources, as shown in Table 1. Because Indications and Warning information may be economic, military, political, (or all three), all targetted resources in CIRIS are considered applicable to this Output subject. Only a portion of one CIRIS subject is relatable to Major Outputs 2. The same is true for Major Outputs 5 and 8. In addition, Major Outputs 8 is the sum of Major Outputs 4 and 7. For this reason it is not appropriate to attempt to calculate the total number of resource dollars that can be equated to the complete list of Major Outputs. Such a value would be composed of double counts, estimates and omissions simply because of the lack of agreement between the definitions of the subjects.

SUBJECT: Comparison of "Major Outputs" with CIRIS Subjects

4. Table 2 shows a similar comparison of the OMB alternative list and CIRIS subjects. The first three Outputs (I.A, I.B., and I.C.) cannot be separated in CIRIS, although CIRIS provides detailed distinction between the 11 types of weapon systems treated under Strategic Forces.

Outputs II. A, II. B, and II. C are similar cases in which CIRIS resources can be subdivided between seven different Tactical Forces, but not the particular OMB categorization of Outputs. Four of the entries (I. D, I. E, II. D, and II. E) are similar to the cases described previously wherein only a portion of the CIRIS subject is applicable.

SUBJECT: Comparison of "Major Outputs" with CIRIS Subjects

Outputs V, VII, and VIII can be related directly to CIRIS, but an identification of how the nations of the world should be subdivided into Advanced, Developing, Lesser, and None must be provided. Outputs IX and X also require definition of the subjects or countries that may be implied by the terms Global and Critical.

5. With the understanding that a primary objective of the Working Group is to inter-relate output and resources, it is recommended that "Output" categories be defined in terms compatible with CIRIS Country-Subject entries. Attached are extracts of CIRIS reporting Instruction describing the scope and detail of pertinent terms.

SECTION VI—CIRIS TERMS FOR POSITIVE INTELLIGENCE SUBJECTS

I. General

a. In CIRIS the POSINT Collection, Processing and Production resources attributed to geographic areas are further distributed to subjects.

b. CIRIS subjects designate information areas (groupings of topics) to which resources are distributed to identify the subjects that are the focus of a Reporting Entity's intelligence tasks. To permit the specific attribution of resources to them, it is necessary that subjects be mutually exclusive. CIRIS subjects are considered to encompass all areas of knowledge. For practical reporting purposes, however, CIRIS lists only 53 subjects. These have been identified to be of continuing national-level interest. Each subject is a collective term that includes implicitly many specific topics that could be identified at finer levels of detail. The CIRIS structure does not provide for the attribution of resources to specific topics in the detail that may be required for in-depth analysis. The collective terms that are the end points of the CIRIS subject structure can, however, serve as the starting points for topical subdivisions oriented toward specific resource issue studies. They afford crosswalks from community statistics to detailed program manager data bases.

c. Entities are expected to attribute their resources to the most specific subjects that realistically describe their tasks. For example, resources dedicated to both Foreign Policy and Domestic Affairs should be divided between these two subjects rather than assigned to Political, General which implies attribution to International Organizations, Biographic Data, Criminal Activities, and Sociological as well. Guidance for the attribution of resources to subjects is provided in Section VII, paragraph 2.

d. The more precise military forces subjects apply primarily to technologically advanced countries. Although any subject may be used with any geographic area, it is likely that only the highly industrialized countries will have elements of Strategic Offensive Forces or Strategic Defensive Forces (as defined in CIRIS). The operating military forces of the less technologically advanced countries are likely to fall under the General Purpose Forces. Revolutionary forces are likely to fall under Insurgency (Subject 27).

e. To improve the usefulness and uniformity of CIRIS data, program managers or contributors may wish to give additional guidance to their entities regarding the subjects that most meaningfully describe their work.

2. CIRIS Subjects

The definitions of CIRIS subjects are presented on pages 22 to 34. The scope of a CIRIS subject is described by a list of topics that indicates the subject's general coverage. The descriptions are intended to be illustrative, not exhaustive. They are guides to determining within which collective subject a specific topic falls.

CONFIDENTIAL

25X1 4. Biographic Data (CSBIO) ☐

25X1 a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

Organized US efforts to obtain and maintain registries of biographic information on important personalities associated with governmental, political, economic, scientific, military or cultural affairs.

25X1 b. ☐ Excludes:

Biographic data obtained or used incidental to work on other subjects.

25X1 5. Criminal Activities (CSCRM) ☐

25X1 a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

(1) Dangerous drugs, including:

(a) Production and distribution.

(b) Extent of cooperation with the USA to suppress illegal drug traffic.

(2) Other criminal activities that are international in character. When used, the specific criminal activity should be identified by footnote on Form 2812A; absence of footnote signifies the topic is drugs.

25X1 b. ☐ Excludes:

Air hijacking and other criminal activities that are attributable to insurgent groups, as defined in Subject 27.

25X1 6. Sociological (CSNC) ☐

25X1 a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

(1) Structure and character of the society.

(2) Cultural affairs; religion, general education. (See Subject 19 for higher education in science and technology.)

(3) Health, welfare, living conditions, and social problems.

(4) Refugees, travel controls.

(5) Population characteristics and demographic data.

(6) Societal aspects of labor. (See exclusion below.)

(7) Cultural materials, such as telephone directories, city plans, cultural publications, and acquisitions.

(8) Public information, the media of mass communication, their influence, and controls imposed on them; public opinion polling

(9) Methodology and effectiveness of political and ideological indoctrination; population vulnerability to psychological operations.

(10) Other topics of a sociological character.

(11) Significance of sociological factors affecting domestic stability.

b. ☐ Excludes:

The labor force as it relates to the national economy and specific industries. (See Economic subjects, particularly Subject 12.)

ECONOMIC SUBJECTS

25X1 8. Economic Plans, Policies, Indices (CEPLA) ☐

25X1 ☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Overall structure and organization of the national economy; historical perspectives and trends.
- b. Fiscal policy; the national budget, its structure and content; the national debt; fiscal stability. (For details of the military budget, see Subject 14.)
- c. National economic development plans and policies, domestic and foreign; dynamics of economic policy formulation.
- d. Loans, grants, aid and developmental assistance (non-military) given or received. (For details on military assistance, see Subject 15.)
- e. Participation in international economic programs.
- f. National investment plans and policies; investment climate; incentives to promote foreign investment; governmental attitude toward foreign participation; tax incentives and tax policies; statistics on public and private investment.
- g. Nationalization, expropriation and debt default; past record and future risks, with particular reference to US interests.
- h. Economic data and trends; national economic indices, such as gross national product, government receipts and expenditures, wages, prices, employment levels.

25X1 9. Money and Finance (CEMON) ☐

25X1 ☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Banking; the structure and operation of the domestic banking system; roles of public and private sectors in banking; availability of credit; interest rates and terms. Stock exchanges. The insurance industry.
- b. Monetary system; its structure and operation; the money supply and flow; stability; monetary reform.

c. Foreign exchange system; national and international financial controls; role of multilateral financing institutions; international monetary proposals, arrangements, negotiations.

d. Gold and foreign exchange holdings, sales, transfers; data, trends, significance.

e. Evasions of financial controls and suspicious financial transactions.

10. International Trade and Business Activities (CETRA) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) Trade policies.
- (2) Overview of the conduct of non-military foreign trade and its financing; statistics.
- (3) Balance of payments data; the level and composition of trade; impact of tourism; impact of illegal traffic; other balance of payments statistics.
- (4) Foreign business and commerce; trade promotion; status and importance of foreign private enterprise; local trade and investment activities of US and multinational corporations and their significance; restrictions on business and their significance; trade statistics.
- (5) Customs system; tariff system; details and statistics.
- (6) Controls on international trade in commodities, goods, services and technology; the domestic system for enforcement of trade controls; participation in international systems of trade controls; effectiveness of trade control systems.
- (7) Environmental controls and their significance to trade and investment.

b. ☐ Excludes:

- (1) General investment climate for business. (See Subject 8.)
- (2) Financial controls. (See Subject 9.)

CONFIDENTIAL

- (3) Trade in military goods; the arms traffic and its control. (See Subject 15.)
- (4) Detailed information on the foreign trade contribution to indigenous industrial production and basic resources. (See Subjects 11 and 12.)

25X1
11. Basic Resources (CEBR) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

All governmental and private aspects (including trade) of the economic topics below. Capabilities, vulnerabilities, and significance to the USA:

- (1) Agriculture.
- (2) Fishing Industry. (See exclusion, below, of fishing vessels.)
- (3) Forestry.
- (4) Fuels and power. Includes solid fuels and manufactured gas, petroleum and natural gas, and electric power. (See exclusion, below, of nuclear power.)
- (5) Metals and minerals.

b. (C) Excludes:

- (1) Movement and location of fishing vessels. (See Subject 16.)
- (2) Nuclear power. (See Subject 21.)

25X1
12. Industrial Production (CIND) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

All governmental and private aspects (including trade) of the production of goods and services for the civilian economy; capabilities, vulnerabilities, and significance to the USA. Covers the following major industry groups:

- (1) Industrial machinery and equipment.
- (2) Vehicles, ships and aircraft.
- (3) Telecommunications and electronic equipment.
- (4) Scientific equipment.
- (5) Chemicals.
- (6) Construction.
- (7) Consumer goods.

(8) Service.

(9) The labor force: organization, industry data, statistics.

b. ☐ Excludes:

- (1) Topics covered under Subjects 11 and 13.
- (2) Social aspects of the labor force. (See Subject 6.)

25X1

13. Military Production and Procurement (MEPRO) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

All governmental and private aspects (including trade) of the production and procurement of materiel and weapon systems for the military establishment and for space systems and forces.

b. (C) Excludes:

- (1) Industrial production for the civilian economy. (See Subject 12.)
- (2) RDT&E of weapon systems and materiel. (See Subjects 20 and 22.)
- (3) RDT&E and production of nuclear weapons and nuclear propulsion systems. (See Subject 21.)
- (4) RDT&E and production of BW/CW materials. (See Subject 47.)

25X1

14. Military Expenditures and Budget (MEEXP) ☐

☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Details on all aspects of the military budget and on expenditures for the total military establishment, including military forces, major weapon systems, and space systems and forces.
- b. Costs of military personnel and related support.
- c. Military RDT&E costs.

25X1

15. Foreign Military Assistance and Sales (MEFMA) ☐

☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Amounts and types of military assistance received from or provided to other countries.
- b. Shipments of machinery and industrial facilities for military uses.
- c. Traffic in arms and munitions, legal or illegal.

25X1

25X1 16. Transportation (CEXP) ☐

25X1 a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) National and international transportation systems and networks, including rail, highway, civil air, inland waterway, merchant marine, and ports and harbor facilities.
- (2) Capabilities to construct, install and operate transport equipment and facilities.
- (3) Vulnerabilities and limitations of the transportation systems.
- (4) Location and movement of civil aircraft, rail and land vehicles, and vessels including the fishing fleet.

25X1 b. ☐ Excludes:

Transportation organic to military forces. (See Subject 48.)

17. Communications (CECOM) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) National and international communication systems.
- (2) Capabilities, limitations and vulnerabilities of operating communication systems.
- (3) Capability to fabricate, install, and operate communication equipment.

b. ☐ Excludes:

Communications integral to military forces.
(See the Military Forces subjects.)

SCIENTIFIC AND TECHNOLOGICAL SUBJECTS

19. Civil Science and Technology (CSTNC)

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) Status and character of basic and applied scientific activities; the organization, planning, and financing of such activities.
- (2) Governmental support to science and technology.
- (3) Higher education and training in scientific and technical fields.
- (4) Status and character of non-military research, development, test, and evaluation, in fields such as:
 - (a) Behavioral sciences, sociology, psychology, anthropology, linguistics, cybernetics.
 - (b) Biology and medicine.
 - (c) Earth sciences, meteorology, oceanography, astronomy, astro-physics.
 - (d) Engineering sciences, electronics, optics.
 - (e) Chemistry, metallurgy, materials.
 - (f) Mathematics and physics.
- (5) Acquisition of advanced S&T equipments for civil uses and their technical characteristics.

b. ☐ Excludes:

S&T related to biological and chemical warfare. (See Subject 47.)

20. Space and Missile Development Program (MSTSM) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as;

- (1) All civil and military space and missile research, development, test, and evaluation. Also includes space and missile operations for R&D purposes.

- (2) Technical characteristics of space and missile systems, equipments and their components.

b. ☐ Excludes:

Production and procurement of developed space and missile equipment. (See Subject 13.)

21. Nuclear Facilities and Programs (MSTAF) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) All civil and military S&T capabilities and work related to the use of nuclear energy.
- (2) Nuclear weapons, propulsion and power research, development, testing, evaluation, and production.
- (3) Civil and military use of nuclear power.
- (4) Detection and analysis of nuclear explosions
- (5) Technical characteristics of nuclear weapons and power systems and their components.

b. ☐ Excludes:

Nuclear weapons deployed with the operating military forces. (See the Military Forces subjects.)

22. Military Science and Technology (MSTNC) ☐

☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Research, development, test and evaluation of weapons, systems, and materiel for the strategic offensive, strategic defensive, and general purpose forces.
- b. Research, development, test and evaluation on military telecommunications and electronics systems.
- c. Other military research, development, test, and evaluation not identified above.

23. Science and Technology, General (CMST) ☐

☐ This subject may be used only to the extent that it is not possible to distinguish among S&T Subjects 19-22.

CONFIDENTIAL

OTHER CIVIL SUBJECTS

24. Physical Environment (CPHEN) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) The physical environment.
- (2) Geography and geology.
- (3) Oceanography, and characteristics of coastal and ocean regions.
- (4) Air space.
- (5) Weather and climate.
- (6) Collection and preparation of maps, charts, and associated materials.

b. ☐ Excludes:

Resources for designated entities in DOD Program Element 310110. (See Subject 51.)

25. Civil Defense (CCVDF) ☐

☐ Includes topics such as:

- a. Plans, organizations and activities to limit casualties and damage incurred by non-military targets.
- b. Plans, organizations and activities to cope with natural disasters.
- c. Indoctrination, training, warning, and alert procedures.
- d. Population control for civil defense.
- e. Plans for evacuation, shelter, and dispersal.

26. Intelligence and Security Services (CINTS) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) Role and structure of intelligence and security services.
- (2) Leadership and personalities.
- (3) Training facilities and equipment.

(4) Operational procedures.

(5) Specific roles, capabilities, and effectiveness relative to espionage, sabotage, subversion, and counterintelligence against external targets, particularly the USA.

(6) Capability to influence foreign governments, to introduce mass destruction weapons into another country, and to conduct psychological operations.

(7) Vulnerabilities.

b. ☐ Excludes:

Internal Security Forces. (See Subject 42.)

27. Insurgency (CINSG) ☐

a. ☐ Includes topics such as:

- (1) Potential or actual uprising or rebellion.
- (2) Indigenous and foreign organizations disposed to or engaged in insurgency.
- (3) Guerrilla and terrorist activities.
- (4) Serious tribal unrest.
- (5) Continued acts of organized violent disaffection.
- (6) Military, political, economic, social and environmental factors that support or inhibit insurgency.

b. ☐ Excludes:

- (1) Actual and potential action, official or unofficial, by the government of a country to promote insurgency in another country. (See Subject 1.)
- (2) Counterinsurgency capabilities and activities. (See Subject 42.)
- (3) Intellectual dissent, opposition, or protest not intended to cause the overthrow of a government by illegal means. (See Subject 2.)
- (4) Isolated terrorism and violence related to crime. (See Subject 5.)

STRATEGIC OFFENSIVE SUBJECTS

28. Ballistic Missile Submarine Forces (NBMS) ☐

- a. ☐ Includes topics such as:
- (1) Related force components.
 - (2) Doctrine, organization, command and control, strength.
 - (3) Materiel and logistics, including base facilities.
 - (4) Technical characteristics of forces and weapons.
 - (5) Operations, exercises, movements, deployments, dispositions, and readiness.
 - (6) Intentions, capabilities, vulnerabilities.
- b. ☐ Excludes:
- (1) RDT&E of weapon systems and materiel. (See Subject 20.)
 - (2) Production and procurement of weapons systems and materiel. (See Subject 13.)

29. Long Range Air Forces (LRAF) ☐

- a. ☐ Includes topics such as:
- (1) Related force components.
 - (2) Doctrine, organization, command and control, strength.
 - (3) Materiel and logistics, including airfield facilities.
 - (4) Technical characteristics of forces and weapons.
 - (5) Operations, exercises, movements, deployments, dispositions, and readiness.
